

afraid of

G

h

o

3 Spooky Stories

The Football

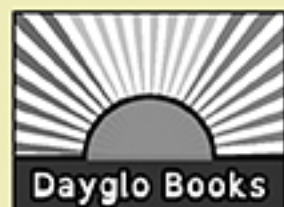

Lia Ginno

The Lookout House

Alan Cassady-Bishop

Mystery Madness

Freya Brian

Published by

Dayglo Books Ltd, Nottingham, UK

www.dayglobooks.co.uk

0007-14-1207-03

© Alan Cassady-Bishop 2014

The right of Alan Cassady-Bishop to be identified as the author of this work has been asserted by him in accordance with the Designs and Copyright Act 1988.

Cover artwork by www.valentineart.co.uk

Illustrations by Alan Cassady-Bishop

Typeset in Opendyslexic
by Abelardo Gonzales (2013)

Printed by in England
by Printondemand-worldwide, Peterborough

Distributed by Filament Publishing Ltd, Croydon

This book is subject to international copyright and may not be copied in any way without the prior written permission of the publishers.

THE LOOKOUT HOUSE

CHAPTER 5

The storm did last all afternoon and evening. Aunt Helen herself suggested we had an early night, after dinner. We could read some books in bed until we felt sleepy.

Little did she know we were feeling wide awake! We'd quietly sorted out wet-weather clothing and sturdy boots in our room and were set to wait for the right time.

It must've been about ten o'clock when we thought the adults had settled down enough for us to sneak out, and so we did.

We had one scary moment when the back door almost blew against the wall when we opened it to the storm. I managed to catch it before it did so, but the sound of the wind and rain seemed deafening. We almost dived into it in our eagerness to close the door.

I don't think you really know how . . . breathless such hard weather makes you. It took us a few seconds to gather our wits and switch on our torches.